Japan: Speculation is mounting that the central bank will raise the discount rate before the Tokyo municipal election on 8 July. The discount rate already has been raised twice this year and other deflationary measures have been taken, but rising prices continue to fuel dissatisfaction with the Tanaka government.

Mexico: Contrary to recent press reports, Mexico is not applying for observer status in the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance (CEMA). According to a Mexican Embassy official in Moscow, Mexico wants to expand trade relations with CEMA countries, but it is not seeking any formal ties with the Soviet-led organization. He acknowledged that such a move would arouse strong domestic political opposition.
